Cooperate to Innovate

Good for working with the Public Service Authority to identify and distribute resources, delegate tasks, and co-design the outcome improvement process.

Facilitate Cooperate to Innovate in an initial planning meeting with a key public service authority contact, and in any subsequent sessions or workshops with the partnership. It may be useful for your community group to engage with Cooperate to Innovate ahead of this and to create a draft version that sets out your expectations of what the public service authority will bring, and their vision of the outcome improvement process.

You can refer to Mission Control to bring your community group's knowledge, expertise, and expertise to the table. Share these notes with the public service authority to develop your discussion around the resources that will underpin your outcome improvement process.

Use these spaces and timeline to agree on important tasks, actions, meetings, and milestones.

What will the public service authority contribute? In our discussions in Social Studios we reflected on how valuable it can be for community groups to see a visual representation of the organisation at this stage. Could you use this together to map relevant stakeholders to approach and involve?

From this starting point, list the kinds of information, support, and input that your community group needs to access from public service authority, and why these are essential to the success of the outcome improvement process.
